Uniformed Snobs. The snobbish performance of a shoulder-strapped man at Annapolis will find no twin in Washington. It seems incredible that in the United States there would be found any man or woman who has achieved any kind of social position thru merit who would to any lady being received in society, whether that lady were a nursery gov-erness or a chambermaid. Time is a great leveler, and there are instances on record of those who have been high in the councils of the Nation and on the honor roll who have been reduced to penury and want, but this fact never obscures the brilliancy of their record or lowers them in the social scale unless they have deliberately gone about to do things which would lower them; but certain it is that as long as all honest work is honorable, just so certain it high positions and who are still honorable are honored, no matter how poor.

At Annapolis some young understrappers undertook to snub Miss Mary H. Beers, because she was serving as gov-erness in the family of an officer there. She is the daughter of a college pro-fessor, and herself highly educated and a lady of culture and great mental attainments. She was visiting her friend, the wife of an officer, and as their little children needed a governess she asked the privilege of teaching thom and it was granted. Some Annapolls upstarts who found her at a reception, accom-panied by one of the young cadets, informed him none too privately that he could not bring Miss Beers to any more social affairs of the cadets, as her so-down.
